BULLET BATTED

HIM ON THE HEAD

John Wood Makes Complaint When That Member Is Made Target For Air Gun Practice.

That man's head was made for more profitable employment and deserves better treatment than a mere target for air gun practice, is the opinion of John Wood, and it is not to wonder at that his feelings, as well as his head, were hurt when a ball from an air rifle batted him on that member, and unceremoniously, too.

It happened Monday and the way of it is told thusly: John was sitting in front of the meat shop thinking no harm, while several boys further up the street were engaged in target practice. All went well until a shot singled out John's head, coming with such violence and so abruptly as to cause the owner to "sit up and take notice" immediately.

It is said that John at first thought he had "bees in his bonnet" and proceeded to get busy along that line, when some one told him he had been struck by a cannon ball.

Horace Tucker was "the man behind the gun" in this instance, and he made the usual settlement with the city for "knocking a knot" on John's head.

OPERATORS STRIKE

Telegraphers at Chicago Do Not Like Their Conditions of Service.

LEFT KEYS AT MIDNIGHT

With a Cheer the Men Employed in the Western Union Offices Arose and Deserted Their Posts.

Strike Was Ordered by Local Union
Without Sanction of the National Organization.

Chicago, Aug. 9.—The telegraph operators employed by the Western Union in Chicago went on strike last night at 12 o'clock. The trouble was precipitated by the Los Angeles strike, which was inaugurated two days ago. Last night the local executive board of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union met and passed resolutions requesting the men to refuse to work with the non-union operators employed in Los Angeles. When the men were notified of this step all operators employed in the overland division of the local office refused to work any longer with the non-union men on the other end of the wire. When this announcement was made Night Chief Harry Price ordered all who refused to work to leave the office. He then went into other divisions and requested the men to go into the overland division. In every case he was met with a refusal until over seventy men had been sent home. The grievance committee of the union called on Mr. Price and notified him that unless every man was reinstated by midnight every union man in the office would be called out. This demand was refused and promptly at midnight by prearrangement a whistle was blown and every operator employed in the main office with the exception of six wire and loop chiefs, together with Night Manager Price and his two assistants, left their keys and with a round of cheers, fled out of the office.

The men employed by the company at various morning newspapers had been notified of the contemplated strike and they also quit work. The national officials of the union spent all day yesterday in an effort to prevent the "rank and file" of the organization from taking matters in their own hands and calling a strike. The men for weeks have maintained a sullen attitude toward the company.

The Chicago force was dissatisfied with the basis of the settlement reached at the time the strike in San Francisco was called off. It was under these conditions that strike was called off. The men were bitterly tired of the conditions under which they were working and could not stand it any longer. When the additional insult of asking them to work with non-union men in Los Angeles was put upon them, they refused to stand and quit work. They could get no information of the situation on the Pacific coast from our national officials, so we decided that it was up to us to take care of ourselves.

NO SETTLEMENT IN SIGHT

Situation at Los Angeles Points to a Long Strike.

Los Angeles, Aug. 9.—Settlement of the telegraphers' strike appears as remote today as during the first hour of the strike. District Superintendent Lamb, representing the company, twice refused to receive or deal with a committee representing the men who walked out and the latter are firm in their attitude of demanding the reinstatement of John E. Ryan, the operator whose discharge was indirectly responsible for the strike.

Superintendent Lamb said today: "I cannot receive a committee of strikers representing a discharged employee or his grievances." The operators will hold a meeting today to consider further plans for the opening of negotiations. There are about twenty men at work in the Western Union office. Superintendent Lamb said: "Business is in a very satisfactory condition. We are working with the business, in fact I think we are ahead of the usual schedule at this hour. The men at work are contented operators and are working with enthusiasm."

Several of the men at the keys today have been at work almost continuously since the strike began Wednesday afternoon.

A Traveling Man's Experience.

"I must tell you my experience on an East bound O. R. & N. R. R. train from Pendleton to Le Grande, Ore.," writes Sam A. Garber, a well known traveling man. "I was in the smoking department with some other traveling men when one of them went out into the coach and came back and said, 'There is a woman sick unto death in the car.' I at once got up and went out, found her very ill with cramp colic, her hands and arms were drawn up so you could not straighten them, and with a death-like look on her face. Two or three ladies were working with her and giving her whisky. I went to my suit case and got my bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy (I never travel without it), ran to the water tank, put a double dose of the medicine in the glass, poured some water into it and stirred it with a pencil; then I had quite a time to get the ladies to let me give it to her, but I succeeded. I could at once see the effect and I worked with her, rubbing her hands, and in twenty minutes I gave her another dose. By this time we were almost into Le Grande, where I was to leave the train. I gave the bottle to the husband to be used in case another dose should be needed, but by the time the train ran into Le Grande she was all right, and I received the thanks of every passenger in the car. For sale by Severs Drug Co."

FILLED WITH DEAD

Streets of Casablanca Laid In Waste by Fire From French Warships.

CITY FULL OF DEAD MOORS

Following Continued Street Disturbances Gunboats In the Harbor Delivered Stern Object Lesson.

Disturbed Moorish Port Is Now Said to Be Calm, Order Having Been Restored.

Tangier, Aug. 4.—The latest news received here from Casablanca says

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased. Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, is fifty-cent and one dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling all about it, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper.

Don't make any mistake but remember the name Swamp-Root. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y. 603 EIGHT BOULEVARD.

that calm and order have now been established. The military governor also requested permission to go on board a ship in the harbor, but was refused. He fears for his personal safety, and although money has been sent here to pay the troops at Casablanca and ensure the performance of their duties, he is unable to secure a bodyguard.

A Moorish officer here has just received a letter from the governor of Tetan, stating that Caid Sir Henry MacLean is no longer in custody of Raisuli, the chief of Kinnas tribe having demanded and obtained permission that he be turned over to their custody. If this be true there is little doubt that the Caid will soon be liberated.

The horrors of the looting of Casablanca by native tribesmen are becoming known, and their recital is inflaming the minds of the natives against all Europeans. The situation in various coastal towns is worse. The natives are excited. A holy war is being preached at Rabat. Anti-foreign sentiment is growing as a result of the activities of fanatical agitators. There is fear of a general outbreak. A number of European families are preparing to flee from Tangier. The Angora tribesmen, in the immediate vicinity of Tangier, are restless and may get out of hand. The Moorish authorities have practically no control of the situation.

The Angora tribesmen are firing two miles from Tangier. The European residents, including the British minister, Gerard A. Lowther and his family, have left their mountain dwellings and returned to the town.

The shooting inside of Casablanca lasted for two full days. The Kabyles have gone back out of range of fire from the warships, but they are ready to swoop down on the town at the first opportunity. Owing to the continued street fighting French warships Wednesday landed 2,000 additional men at Casablanca, where the Jewish quarter had been sacked. Many persons were massacred in the streets. The city is said to be full of dead Moors and the Moorish quarter is in ruins, having been set on fire by the shells from the big guns of the cruisers. All the stores are closed and much hunger and distress prevails among the poor.

The foreign consuls have ordered the stores to be reopened and have established a special tariff for foodstuffs, designed to mitigate the sufferings of the poor. The Europeans, who are all safe, either on board ships or at the consulates, are guarded by blue-jackets.

French sailors are guarding the British consulate at Casablanca where the consular agents of the United States, Germany, Austria-Hungary and Sweden have sought refuge. The Italian and Portuguese consuls are at the French consulate. A mine, from which a heavy sustained fire was directed against the French consulate, was demolished by the guns of the French ships at the request of the Moroccan authorities.

The European shops were pillaged but no Europeans were killed. The state bank agency at Casablanca has been robbed of about $15,000 but no details of the robbery have been made public.

The French consulate was attacked by Moors during the night of Aug. 5. One blue jacket of the guard was killed and three were badly wounded. The customhouse at Casablanca was looted by natives on Tuesday and many other buildings were set on fire and destroyed.

There are a great many people who have slight attacks of indigestion and dyspepsia nearly all the time. Their food may satisfy the appetite but it fails to nourish the body simply because the stomach is not in fit condition to do the work it is supposed to do. It can't digest the food you eat. The stomach should be given help. You ought to take something that will do the work your stomach can't do. Kodol for Indigestion and Dyspepsia, a combination of natural digestants and vegetable solids, digests the food itself and gives strength and health to the stomach. Pleasant to take. Sold by all druggists.

A "piled pipe" is wanted in the valley of Agallil, in Corsica, where great damage is being done by a plague of crickets and a substantial sum is promised to any one who can suggest an efficacious remedy.

THE LION AND THE MOUSE.

By CHARLES KLEIN.

A Story of American Life Novelized From the Play by ARTHUR HORNBLOW.

COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY C. W. DILLINGHAM COMPANY.

There was one other person in New York who that same morning had read the newspaper item regarding the Ryder-Roberts betrothal, and he did not take the matter so calmly as Shirley had done. On the contrary, it had the effect of putting him into a violent rage. This was Jefferson. He was working in his studio when he read it, and five minutes later he was tearing up to see the author of it. He understood its object, of course. They wanted to force his hand, to shame him into this marriage, to so entangle him with the girl that no other alternative would be possible to an honorable man. It was a despicable trick, and he had no doubt that his father was at the back of it. So his mind now was fully made up. He would go away at once where they could not make his life a burthen to the old marriage which was fast becoming a nightmare to him. He would close up his studio and leave immediately for Europe. He would show his father up for all that he was a man and expected to be treated as one.

On arriving home the first person he saw was the ubiquitous Mr. Bagley, who stood at the top of the first staircase giving some letters to the butler. Jefferson cornered him at once, holding out the newspaper containing the offending paragraph.

"Say, Bagley," he cried, "what does this mean? Is this any of your doing?" The English secretary gave his employer's son a haughty stare and then, without deigning to reply or even to glance at the newspaper, continued his instructions to the servant.

"Here, Jenkins, get stamps for all these letters and see they are mailed at once. They are very important."

Very good, said the butler, and disappeared, while Jefferson, impatient, repeated his question.

"Really, Jefferson, you go too far. Do you suppose for one instant that I would condescend to trouble myself with your affairs?"

Jefferson was in no mood to put up with insolence from any one, especially from a man whom he heartily despised, so, advancing menacingly, he thundered:

"I mean—were you in the discharge of your menial-like duties instructed by my father to send that paragraph to the newspapers regarding my alleged betrothal to Miss Roberts? Yes or no?"

The man winced and made a step backward. There was a gleam in the Ryder eye which he knew by experience boded no good.

"Here, Jefferson," he said in a more conciliatory tone, "I know absolutely nothing about the paragraph. This is the first I hear of it. Why not ask your father?"

"I will," replied Jefferson grimly. "He was turning to go in the direction of the library when Bagley stopped him."

"You cannot possibly see him now," he said. "Regent Ellison of the secret service is in there with him, and your father told me not to disturb him on any account. He has another appointment at 3 o'clock with some woman who writes books."

Seeing that the fellow was in earnest, Jefferson did not resist. He could see his father a little later or send him a message through his mother. Proceeding upstairs, he found Mrs. Ryder in her room, and in a few energetic words he explained the situation to his mother. They had gone too far with this unwholesome business, he said; his father was trying to interfere with his personal liberty, and he was going to put a stop to it. He would leave at once for Europe. Mrs. Ryder had already heard of the projected trip abroad, so the news of this sudden departure was not the shock it might otherwise have been.

As Jefferson went downstairs something white on the carpet attracted his attention. He stooped and picked it up. It was a letter. It was in Bagley's handwriting and had evidently been dropped by the man to whom the secretary had given it to read. But what interested Jefferson more than anything else was that it was addressed to Miss Kate Roberts. Under ordinary circumstances a man's remarks should not have tempted the young man to read a letter addressed to another, but he was convinced that his father's secretary was using the Ryder roof and name to further his own ends and victimize a girl who, although sophisticated enough to know better, was too silly to realize the risk she ran at the hands of an unscrupulous man. Hesitating no longer, Jefferson tore open the letter and read:

My Dearest Wife: That is to say I have arranged everything. Next Wednesday—house of a discreet friend of mine—a minister will marry us. Then we will go to city hall and get through the legal part of it. Afterward we can catch the train for Europe. I shall be waiting at the ladies' room at the Holland House. Come there with a closed cab. Your devoted

PIZZ.

"Pizz!" Jefferson whistled. A close shave this for Senator Roberts, he thought. His first impulse was to go upstairs again to his mother and put the matter in her hands. She would make short work of Mr. Bagley. But, thought Jefferson, why should he spoil a good thing? He could afford to wait a day or two. There was no hurry. He could allow Bagley to think all was going swimmingly and then uncover the plot at the eleventh hour. He would even let this letter go to Kate. There was no difficulty in procuring another envelope and imitating the handwriting, and when Bagley was just preparing to go to the rendezvous he would spring the trap. Such a cad deserved no mercy. The scandal would be a knockout blow, his father would discharge him on the spot, and that would be the last they would see of the aristocratic English secretary. Jefferson put the letter in his pocket and left the house rejoicing.

While the foregoing incidents were happening John Burkett Ryder was seated in his library. The man had come home earlier than usual, for he had two important callers to see by appointment that afternoon. One was Sergeant Ellison, who had to report on his mission to Massachusetts; the other was Miss Shirley Green, the author of "The American Octopus," who had at last deigned to honor him with a return visit. Pending the arrival of these visitors the financier was busy with his secretary trying to get rid as rapidly as possible of what business and correspondence there was on hand.

The plutocrat was sitting at his desk poring over a mass of papers. Between his teeth was the inevitable long black cigar, and when he raised his eyes to the light a close observer might have remarked that they were sea green, a color they assumed when the man of millions was absorbed in scheming new business deals. Every now and then he stopped reading the papers to make quick calculations on scraps of paper. Then if the result pleased him a smile overspread his statures features. He rose from his chair and nervously paced the floor as he always did when thinking deeply.

"Five millions," he muttered, "not a cent more, if they won't sell well 'crush them'."

Mr. Ryder entered. Mr. Ryder looked up quickly.

Mr. Tom Groves was in Cannelton

"Well, Hingley?" he said interrogatively. "Miss Sergeant Ellison come?" "Yes, sir. But Mr. Herts is downstairs. He insists on seeing you about the Philadelphia gas deal. He says it is a matter of life and death."

"To him—yes," answered the financier dryly. "I will come up now. We might as well have it out now."

Mr. Bagley went out and returned almost immediately, followed by a short, fat man, rather badly dressed and apologetic in appearance. He looked like a prosperous brewer, while, as a matter of fact, he was president of a gas company, one of the shrewdest promoters in the country, and a big man in Wall street. There was only one bigger man and that was John Ryder. But today Mr. Herts was not in good condition. His face was pale and his manner flustered and nervous. He was plainly worried.

"Mr. Ryder," he began with excited gesture, "the terms you offer are preposterous. It would mean disaster to the stockholders. Our gas properties are worth six times the amount. We will sell out for $20,000,000, not a cent less."

Ryder shrugged his shoulders. "Mr. Herts," he replied coolly, "I am busy today and in no mood for arguing. We'll either buy you out or force you out. Choose. You have our offer. Five millions for your gas property. Will you take it?"

In Memory.

In memory of little L. D. Hawkins, infant son of Richard and Lula Hawkins, who died Sunday, June 25, 1907, aged seven months and eleven days.

We are and fondly today. For it is just one month since little L. D. went away.

Friday we visited your grave—You were the most precious gift God ever gave.

Could you have shared with us our lives to cheer. I know I could have loved you even dearer than when here.

But then, God knows best. And will keep you safe in the haven of rest. Dear, sweet little L. D., We miss your merry prattle and childish glee. Many a time has our bright smiling face looked up in grief.

And your eyes, now in heaven could out shine. I weep and mourn every day. As I think in your slumber you lay sleeping so sweetly beneath the sod. And resting so peacefully in the arms of God.

Sleep on, dear sweet little soul, I would not ask you back now that happy goal. For you are better off than we by far. Busy little heart, at guiding star. But in our home your presence we sadly miss. When on your cold brow I pressed a kiss. As in your little white coffin you peacefully lay.

Farewell, dear babe, till we meet some sweet day. MOTHER.

He would go away at once where they could not make his life a burden with this odious marriage which was fast becoming a nightmare to him. He would close up his studio and leave immediately for Europe. He would show his father once for all that he was a man and expected to be treated as one.

On arriving home the first person he saw was the ubiquitous Mr. Bagley, who stood at the top of the first staircase giving some letters to the butler. Jefferson cornered him at once, holding out the newspaper containing the offending paragraph.
"Say, Bagley," he cried, "what does this mean? Is this any of your doing?"
The English secretary gave him a look at the newspaper and then, without deigning to reply, he gave a glance at the newspaper, continued his instructions to the servant:

"Here, Jenkins, get stamps for all these letters and see they are mailed at once. They are very important."
"Very good, sir."

The man took the letters and disappeared, while Jefferson, impatient, repeated his question:
"My doing?" sneered Mr. Bagley.
"Really, Jefferson, you go too far. Do you suppose for instance that I would condescend to trouble myself with your affairs?"

Jefferson was in no mood to put up with insolence from any man, especially from a man whom he heartily despised, so, advancing menacingly, he thundered:
"You were in the discharge of your menial-like duties instructed by my father to send that paragraph to the newspapers regarding my alleged betrothal to Miss Roberts? Yes or no?"

The man winced and made a step backward. There was a gleam in the Ryder eye which he knew by experience boded no good.
"Really, Jefferson," he said in a more conciliatory tone, "I know absolutely nothing about the paragraph. This is the first I hear of it. Why not ask your father?"

"I might," sneered Jefferson grimly.
He was turning to go in the direction of the library when Bagley stopped him.
"You cannot possibly see him now," he said. "Sergeant Ellison of the secret service is in there with him, and your father told me not to disturb him without any account. He has another appointment at 3 o'clock with some woman who writes books."

Seeing that the fellow was in earnest, Jefferson did not resist. He could see his father a little later or send him a message through his mother. Proceeding upstairs, he found Mr. Ryder in her room, and in a few energetic words he explained the situation to his mother. They had gone too far with this matchmaking business, he said; his father was trying to interfere with his personal liberty, and he was going to put a stop to it. He would leave at once for Europe. Mr. Ryder had already heard of the projected trip abroad, so the news of this sudden departure was not the shock which otherwise have been.
At Jefferson went downstairs something white on the carpet attracted his attention. He stooped and picked it up. It was a letter. It was in Bagley's handwriting and had evidently been dropped by the man to whom the secretary had given it to post. But what interested Jefferson more than anything else was that it was addressed to Miss Kate Roberts. Under ordinary circumstances a king's ransom would have been tempted the young man to read a letter addressed to another, but he was convinced that his father's secretary was an affeerer, and he was carrying on an intrigue in this manner it could have only one meaning. It was his duty to unveil a man who was using the Ryder name and name to further his own ends and victimize a girl who, although sophisticated enough to know how better, was so young and so trusting that she was at the hands of an unscrupulous man. Hastening no longer, Jefferson tore open the envelope and read:

"My Dear Miss Kate—As to the letter I have arranged everything. Next Wednesday—just a week from today—we will go to the house of a distant friend of mine where a minister will marry us. Then we will go to city hall and get around the part of it. Afterwards we can catch the ladies' room at the railroad house where Mr. Bagley will be waiting for us. I will come there with a closed cab. I'll avoid."

"Phaw!" Jefferson whistled. A close

"Say, Bagley, what does this mean?" was just preparing to go to the rendezvous he would spring the trap. Such a knock-out blow, his father would discharge him on the spot, and that would be the last they would see of the aristocratic English secretary.

While the foregoing incidents were happening John Burkett Ryder was secluded in his library. The great man had come home earlier than usual, for he had two important callers to see by appointment that afternoon. One was Sergeant Ellison, who had to report on his mission to Mississippi; the other was Miss Shirley Green, the author of "The American Octopus," who had at last deigned to honor him with a visit. During the arrival of these visitors the financier was busy with his secretary trying to get rid as rapidly as possible of what business and correspondence were which he knew by experience boded no good.

The plotter was sitting at his desk poring over a mass of papers. Between his teeth was the inevitable long black cigar, and when he raised his eyes to the light a close observer might have remarked that they were sea green, a color they assumed when the man of millions was absorbed in scheming new business deals. Every now and then he stopped reading the papers to make quick calculations on scraps of paper. Then if the result pleased him a smile overcame his saturnine features. He rose from his chair and nervously paced the floor as he always did when thinking deeply.
"Five millions," he muttered, "not a cent more. If they won't sell we'll crush them!"

Mr. Bagley entered. Mr. Ryder looked up quickly.

The Pain Family

You know them; they are numerous, and make their presence felt everywhere. The names of the family are Headache, Toothache, Earache, Backache, Stomach ache, Neuralgia, etc. They are sentinels that warn you of any derangement of your system. When the brain nerves become exhausted or irritated, Headache makes you miserable; if the stomach nerves are weak, indigestion results, and you double up with pain, and if the more prominent nerves are affected, Neuralgia simply makes life unendurable. The way to stop pain is to soothe and strengthen the nerves. Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills do this. The whole Pain family yield to their influence. Harmless if taken as directed.

"And Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are an excellent remedy for overcoming headache, toothache, earache, backache, stomach ache, neuralgia, etc. I have used them for the last six months and they have cured me of all sorts of pains. I feel like a new man now."—J. H. MERRILL, Peru, Ind.

"Well, Bagley?" he said interrogatively. "Has Sergeant Ellison come?"
"Yes, sir. But Mr. Herts is downstairs. He insists on seeing you about the Philadelphia gas deal. He says it is a matter of life and death."
"To him—yes," answered the financier dryly. "Let him come up. We might as well have it out now."
Mr. Bagley went out and returned almost immediately, followed by a short, fat man, rather badly dressed and apparently in appearance. He looked like a prosperous lawyer, but, as a matter of fact, he was president of a gas company, one of the abridged promoters in the country, and a big man in Wall street. There was only one finer man and that was John Ryder. But today, Mr. Herts was not in good condition. His face was pale and his manner flustered and nervous. He was plainly worried.

"Mr. Ryder," he began with excited gesture, "the terms you offer are preposterous. It would mean disaster to the stockholders. Our gas properties are worth six times that amount. We will sell out for $200,000,000, not a cent less."
Ryder shrugged his shoulders.
"Mr. Herts," he replied coolly, "I am busy today and in no mood for arguing. We'll either buy you out or force you out. Choose. You have our offer. Five millions for your gas property. Will you take it?"

In Memory.
In memory of little L. D. Hawkins, infant son of Richard and Lula Hawkins, who died Sunday, June 25, 1907, aged seven months and eleven days:
We are sad and lonely today,
Thinking sweetly beneath the sod,
That one month since little L. D. went away.
Friday we visited your grave—
You were the most precious gift God ever gave.
Could you have stayed with us our lives to cheer,
I know I could have loved you even dearer than when here;
But then, God knows best
And will keep you safe in the haven of rest.
Dear, sweet little L. D.,
We miss your merry prattle and childish glee,
Many a time has your bright smiling face looked up in mine;
And your eyes, so star in heaven could out shine.

I weep and mourn every day
As I think in your silent grave you lay
Sleeping so sweetly beneath the sod
And resting so happy in the arms of God.
Sleep on, dear sweet little soul,
I would not call you back from that happy rest
For you are better off there than we by far,
Happy little angel, my guiding star.
But in our home your presence we sadly miss
When on your cold brow I pressed a kiss.
As in your little white coffin you so peacefully lay,
Farewell, dear babe, till we meet some sweet day.

Weak Kidneys
Weak Kidneys, surely point to weak kidney nerves. The kidneys, like the heart, and the stomach, and their weakness, not in the organ itself, but in the nerves that control and guide and strengthen them. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is a medicine specially prepared to reach these controlling nerves. To doctor the kidneys alone, is futile. It is a waste of time, and of money as well.
If your back aches or is weak, if the urine is cloudy, or if dark and strong, if you have dreams of frights or other distressing or dangerous kidney diseases, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative a month—either in liquid or solid form, and see what it can and will do for you. Druggist recommended and sold.
